Three Create Trophy for Clinton Global Citizen Award

BY POLLY SEALBY
ART EDITOR

To avoid conflict of interest, the Clinton Global Initiative had selected the three artists. Each of these artists has designed and built a metal sculpture for the Clinton Global Citizen Award, in honor of Bill Clinton, the former president's vision for the future of the world.

Fashion designer and philanthropist Michelle Obama, the former first lady, said in a statement that the sculptures will be displayed at the annual Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

The sculptures are designed to reflect the diversity of the world and the need for collaboration to make a difference. They will be displayed at the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

Three Artists Picked To Create Trophy

Metal sculptor Serge Jolmeau of Haiti was one of the artists chosen to create the sculptures for the Clinton Global Citizen Award.

Jolmeau, who has been working in metal sculpture for 25 years, said he was inspired by the art of his country and the beauty of the metal. He said he wanted to create a sculpture that would be a symbol of hope and inspiration for the world.

Jolmeau's sculpture, titled "The Hope of Haiti," is a large, abstract metal sculpture that features a series of interconnected metal elements that represent the country's history and culture.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

Three Artists Picked To Create Trophy

Metal sculptor Serge Jolmeau of Haiti was one of the artists chosen to create the sculptures for the Clinton Global Citizen Award.

Jolmeau, who has been working in metal sculpture for 25 years, said he was inspired by the art of his country and the beauty of the metal. He said he wanted to create a sculpture that would be a symbol of hope and inspiration for the world.

Jolmeau's sculpture, titled "The Hope of Haiti," is a large, abstract metal sculpture that features a series of interconnected metal elements that represent the country's history and culture.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

Three Artists Picked To Create Trophy

Metal sculptor Serge Jolmeau of Haiti was one of the artists chosen to create the sculptures for the Clinton Global Citizen Award.

Jolmeau, who has been working in metal sculpture for 25 years, said he was inspired by the art of his country and the beauty of the metal. He said he wanted to create a sculpture that would be a symbol of hope and inspiration for the world.

Jolmeau's sculpture, titled "The Hope of Haiti," is a large, abstract metal sculpture that features a series of interconnected metal elements that represent the country's history and culture.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.

The sculptures will be displayed in various locations around the world, including the United Nations Headquarters in New York City, the Clinton Global Initiative in New York City, and the Clinton Global Citizen Awards dinner in New York City.